

YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'He Can Sue— And Get It . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: My husband told me something yesterday that shocked me. He swears he is right. He claims a man can collect alimony from his wife.

I've never heard of such a thing. It's hard to believe that any man would stoop to such a level but it's even more incredible that the law would allow it. He insists it's true and says he doesn't see anything so terrible about it when the woman has the money.

I think my husband is crazy. What do you think?—DOUBTING THOMASINA

Dear Doubting: Your husband may be crazy, but he is right about this one.

If the wife is proven to be responsible for the marriage failure and if it can be further proven that he is unable (due to ill health or other reasons) to live in the manner to which her money has accustomed him, he can sue for alimony—and get it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 18, a sharp dresser, quick on the comeback, and I have a figure that men turn around and whistle at. But for some mysterious reason I haven't had a date in three months.

I work in an office with mostly married men. The few single squares around aren't my style. Don't suggest swimming, skating, bowling or tennis. I'm not the athletic type. Movies hurt my eyes and music bores me. Church is out. I got my fill of that when I went to Sunday school.

Please don't tell me to sign up for an adult education class. I've seen those middle-aged spooks with inch-thick glasses who go to school all their lives. And don't suggest that I get interested in politics. I hate doorbell-ringing and envelope-stuffing.

How about being a good scout and giving a lonesome girl a hand?—NANCY

Dear Nancy: God helps those who help themselves, and so far as I can see, you're not moving a muscle.

There are an awful lot of things you don't like, Petunia, which is the biggest part of your problem. Go through the list of activities you don't want to try and make an honest effort to revise your thinking. Unless you change your attitude (Continued on Page 10)

Student From Spain Arrives in Torrance

By JERRY REYNOLDS
Spanish lessons at North High School may become a little more important this year, for the school will have a pert young senorita among its student body.

Miss Aracelli Blanco Rivas, a 17-year-old dark-haired girl from Bilbao, Spain, arrived Aug. 17 by a charter flight from Spain for a year at North High. She is the third of the trio of AFS exchange students, who will be attending Torrance high schools.

Aracelli will live with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Woef at 2406 W. 177th St. She will have a brother and sister to teach her something about American life.

Pat, 16-year-old daughter of the Woefs and a junior at North High, and her brother, Russ, 12, were happy to greet their new foster-sister.

The Lady from Spain attended a Catholic girls high school in Spain and will terminate her education after her year at North High.

Aracelli's father is an importer in Bilbao. Her mother keeps house. Aracelli has four brothers, ranging in age from 13 to 23.

While some students may speak to their new colleague in Spanish, those without instruction in the language need not worry, for Aracelli speaks very good English.

Aracelli, like the other AFS students in Torrance, will wind up her year in this country with a tour across the nation, climaxed by a visit to President John F. Kennedy at the White House.
